Dr. Thomas Gittens United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) Country Director during his remarks at the opening of the training in project writing stressed that achieving transformation is never an easy task and in part dependent on increased technical and functional capacities but more so on empowering major groups to engage governments and political leaders and provide solutions that result in a shift from business as usual to meaningful and sustained change.

The identified participants are from the following major groups; Women, Indigenous and tribal communities and CBO’s/NGO’s.

For delivering this training, 23 to 25 October 2013 the UNDP has partnered with the National Institute for Environment and Development (NIMOS) as well as the Global Environment Facility (GEF) Small Grants Programme (SGP) program implemented by the UNDP.
